Assistant/Associate Teaching Professor

The Department of Nutritional Sciences in Penn State's College of Health and Human Development is seeking a highly motivated and versatile Assistant or Associate Teaching Professor for a 48 week, non-tenure track appointment beginning May 15 or August 15, 2021. The successful candidate will teach in the in-residence Nutritional Sciences undergraduate major with responsibility for courses related to nutritional physiology, biochemistry, and metabolism, and will have some instructional responsibilities in the on-line Masters' of Professional Studies program and/or summer session General Education courses.

The successful candidate will have demonstrated skills in communicating with undergraduate and graduate students and the ability to teach master's level courses on line focused on nutrient metabolism and applied nutrition. The expected teaching responsibilities are for three 3-credit courses per term fall and spring and two 3-credit courses per summer. The successful applicant will also be expected to contribute service to the Department of Nutritional Sciences in terms of participation in curricular affairs and recruiting events in-person or on-line.

Competencies critical to success include:

- outstanding interpersonal verbal and written communications
- effective understanding of the nutritional sciences curricula and its tracks
- analytical problem-solving and organizational skills
- self-motivation and the ability to handle multiple tasks and meet deadlines
- timeliness of response
- keeping records of key competencies
- and the consistent use of sound judgment, ethical decision making, and professionalism

The appointment will be either an Assistant Teaching Professor or as Associate Teaching Professor based on the selected candidate's qualifications. The position of Assistant Teaching Professor requires a doctoral degree in Nutrition or a closely related discipline, and 1-2 years of related experience. The position of Associate Teaching Professor requires 5 or more years of teaching experience and demonstrated excellence in one or more areas including the design and development of new courses and/or course revisions; introduction of innovative teaching and/or assessment methodologies; support of curricular affairs.

This is a fixed-term appointment funded for one year from date of hire (expected to be May 16 or August 16, 2021) with excellent possibility of re-funding. The review of applications will begin immediately and continue until a suitable candidate is identified. A complete application must include: a cover letter that outlines the applicant's in-person and on-line teaching philosophy and experience; a statement of how the applicant can contribute to fostering a welcoming, inclusive environment; a complete curriculum vitae; a list of the names and contact information for three references who are familiar with your teaching experience. Examples of teaching materials such as a teaching portfolio may be requested at a later time. Penn State offers a welcoming environment and excellent benefits.
