Teaching Position in Nutrition and/or Exercise Physiology,
Department of Nutrition and Exercise Physiology
University of Missouri

The University of Missouri invites applications for a non-tenure track teaching faculty position in exercise physiology at all ranks – Assistant Teaching, Associate Teaching or Teaching Professor.

The successful applicant will have, at a minimum, a Masters or PhD in Exercise Physiology or closely related discipline.

Candidates will be evaluated on a record of accomplishment of quality instruction. Having ACSM or other certifications in the field is also desired.

This position will involve teaching undergraduate exercise and fitness courses either in person or online for one of our undergraduate and/or graduate degree programs. The mission of the Department of Nutrition and Exercise Physiology at the University of Missouri is to improve the health of Missourians and the larger population through research, teaching and outreach related to nutrition and physical activity. We strive to be a diverse set of leaders, innovators and educators who promote improved human health through our focus on nutrition and physical activity. Information about the department of Nutrition and Exercise Physiology can be found at the departmental link (http://nep.missouri.edu).

Review of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the position is filled. Competitive salary will be provided to successful candidates. Please submit curriculum vitae, a narrative of teaching philosophy and educational interests, and the names and contact information of three references.

The University of Missouri values diversity and is committed to working towards achieving equity and inclusion within all its programs. Candidates applying for this position are required to provide a statement addressing how they would utilize their former experience and knowledge to promote diversity and inclusion at the university and how that commitment would add value to Division of Food, Nutrition, and Exercise Sciences.

Preferential review of applications received prior to July 1, 2021.
